Aleix Clapés and the murals of Milà's house

Aleix Clapés (1846-1920), Catalonian symbolist painter of great expressive force, directed the decorative murals in Guadi's famous building known as "la Pedrera" between the years 1909 and 1912, with the help of young painters. In this work, Clapés took into his hands one of his greatest passions: those of tapestry imitations of the Royal House, with this, achieving his most important work as a mural decorator, a craft that had started in his youth in Reus, perfected it in Rome and combined it with other arts, crafts, cultural activities and businesses. This article is the result of never before published documents from the artist and an investigation of periodicals which bring to light the assiduity and delight with which Clapés reproduced his tapestries pictorially and presented them to the public eye of Barcelona. It is also to clarify misconceptions but the most important intention is to contribute to the restitution of an extraordinary painter that has been forgotten in history.

Aleix Clapés y las pinturas murales de la Casa Milà

Aleix Clapés (1846-1920), pintor simbolista catalán de gran fuerza expresiva, dirigió la decoración mural del celebérrimo edificio de Gaudí conocido como "la Pedrera" entre 1909 y 1912, auxiliado por un grupo de pintores noveles. En este encargo, Clapés echó mano de una de sus grandes pasiones: la imitación de tapices de las colecciones de la Real Casa, alcanzando con ello su obra más remarcable como decorador mural, un oficio que había iniciado en su juventud en Reus, había perfeccionado en Roma y combinaba con otras actividades creativas, culturales y empresariales. Este artículo es el resultado de la consulta de documentos inéditos del artista y de una investigación hemerográfica en torno a la asiduidad y deleite con la que Clapés reproducía tapices pictóricamente y los exponía al público barcelonés. En él, también se aclaran y se matizan equívocos, pero su intención mayúscula es contribuir a la restitución de un pintor fuera de serie, víctima del olvido de la historiografía.
